

Bandspeed to Spotlight Its AirMaestro™ Access Point Platform at the 2006 Silicon Hills Summit

Austin, Texas – September 25, 2006 – Bandspeed, the leader in Wi-Fi® management platforms for the business mass market, today announced that Bill Eversole, president and CEO, will present at the 2006 Silicon Hills Summit, September 28 at the Hilton Austin in Austin, Texas. Eversole's presentation will provide an overview of Bandspeed's AirMaestro Wi-Fi access point (AP) platform, and will also discuss how AirMaestro addresses today's WLAN challenges for the mass market.

AirMaestro, an 802.11 Wi-Fi access point platform consisting of AirMaestro software and integrated circuits, enables the mass market to deploy and manage highly intelligent, automated, robust, and secure enterprise-class Wi-Fi networks. AirMaestro is the first and only AP platform to deliver the benefits of enterprise-class Wi-Fi networks for the mass market, including fast, reliable connectivity; robust security; and unsurpassed ease of deployment, use and management – all at an affordable price.

About Bill Eversole

Eversole has served as president and CEO of Bandspeed since 2004. He has guided the company to several strategic customer engagements and design wins, and a strong competitive position in the Wi-Fi enterprise market with proven, world-class technology. Prior to Bandspeed, Eversole was a senior executive at Texas Instruments for over 25 years where he last served as general manager of the Worldwide DSL Business in the Broadband Communications Group. His technical achievements include creating the industry's first integrated two-chip ADSL CPE solution.

The Silicon Hills Summit is an invitation-only event presented by Austin Ventures and Shelton Group, along with corporate sponsors. This event offers a unique opportunity to hear presentations from over 18 leading private, Texas-based semiconductor companies over the course of one day, in a single location.
